Revised Prospectus updated: 23 Oct 2025

Brief about Dame Edith Mary Brown

The first step on the Indian soil for Miss Edith Brown was no chance event, but a culmination of a dream that she had since she was 17 years old. Edith learnt of the misery of the lives of Indian women, living with disease behind Purdah and dying agonizing deaths. She vowed to deliver these women from death and disease by bringing to them the services of a female doctor.

Brown worked unceasingly till she obtained a scholarship to study in Griton College, Cambridge in 1882. Edith Brown completed her medical training that qualified her to work in India. The opportunity came quickly when Miss A. Greenfield, Head of Zenana Mission at Ludhiana, asked for a woman doctor to take charge of Charlotte Hospital that she had opened some 10 years ago in the city. And off did go Dr. Edith Brown to fulfill her Tryst with Destiny that tied her life irreversibly with the lives of the people this industrious town of Punjab for decades to come.

The superstitions of the local people, unwillingness of the patients to come, expectations for instant cures, a gross lack of medical equipment and facilities, together compounded to make her dreams of service to humanity an up-hill and daunting task.

By mid 1894 the authorities of the city of Ludhiana had permitted Dr. Brown the use of a vacant school building. With minimum funds and thrift, Dr Brown inaugurated the North India School of Medicine for Christian Women. By November 1894, six girls had enrolled themselves for the nursing course thereby launching the school.

Once on the way, no paucity of funds or dearth of facilities could prevent this iron willed lady from taking the school forwards. By the end of 1894 the school obtained permission for its students to take the examinations at Lahore at par with the men students.

By April 1899, the North India School of Medicine produced its first set of four graduates.

The foundations for formal medical education were laid in our very own city by this great doctor, educator, administrator who changed the face of medical history in the country.

At 84 years of age Dame Edith Brown left Ludhiana to take up residence in Srinagar, not with intentions to retire but with plans to embark on new journeys to spread the word of God through the healing ministry..

On Dec 6, 1956, aged 92, this relentless pioneer and humble servant of God breathed her last in the Rainawari Hospital, Srinagar. All her life she had labored for her Lord, seeking nothing in return and now finally her Lord had ordered her to cease her labors and return to His loving fold while others walking in her foot steps continued to carry forth her mission.
